HOTEL SAN JOSÉ

do you know the way?

Hotel San José is a 40-room urban bungalow-style hotel tucked behind stucco walls and set amidst lush garden courtyards on South Congress. Our legacy begins long before now, in the 1930s, when the San José was a vibrant motor court on South Congress Avenue.

But as Austin changed, the motel fell into disrepair. Thankfully, in 1994, the keen eye of Liz Lambert saw something more than low-rent lodging while spending time across the street at the Continental Club. After a long road, the way was found to our modern iteration. (You can see the entire process chronicled in the documentary, 'Last Days of the San José,' which explores human relationships in gentrification and urban renewal.)

Celebrated San Antonio architecture firm Lake | Flato helped transform the property into its current incarnation. With bed platforms made of reclaimed native hardwood, custom saddle leather chairs by artist Jamey Garza, decomposed granite pathways, and an impeccably curated landscape designed by artist Mark Word—the San José's design reflects a voice that is proudly local and uniquely Texan. Hotel San José has a variety of spaces for meetings and private events that reflect the heart and soul of Austin.

Our Courtyard Lounge offers a hidden, outdoor space right in the heart of South Congress for small groups or private buyouts. This beloved gathering space is ideal for corporate happy hours, social celebrations, and special events of any kind.
